area would light a fire at a height to warn boats of any impending dangers like rocks or even land. The early constructors of lighthouses included the Greeks, Romans and Phoenicians.

- (3) How do you think these lighthouses showed the way to incoming ships ? Those were the days when technology had not taken over the world. The lighthouses used lamps to guide the ships. However, these lamps could throw light only as far as a few miles into the sea. In modern times mirrors, prisms, electricity and the automatic working of a lighthouse came into use.
