"Housekeeping" by Natasha Tretheway

We mourn the broken things, chair legs

[3] DCE-05

wrenched from their seats, chipped plates, the threadbare clothes. We work the magic of glue, drive the nails, mend the holes. We save what we can, melt small pieces of soap, gather fallen pecans, keep neck bones for soup. Beating rugs against the house, we watch dust, lit like stars, spreading across the yard. Late afternoon, we draw the blinds to cool the rooms, drive the bugs out. My mother irons, singing, lost in reverie. I mark the pages of a mail-order catalog, listen for passing cars. All day we watch for the mail, some news from a distant place.

(a) Do you think the narrator is a healthy person? Why/Why not?

[4] DCE-05

- (b) Who does 'we' represent? 5
- (c) What is dust compared to ? Offer an alternative simile.
- (d) What do the last two lines convey about the life of the narrator and her mother? 5

7. "September Tomatoes" by Karina Borowicz

The whiskey stink of rot has settled in the garden, and a burst of fruit flies rises when I touch the dying tomato plants.

Still, the claws of tiny yellow blossoms flail in the air as I pull the vines up by the roots and toss them in the compost.

It feels cruel. Something in me isn't ready to let go of summer so easily. To destroy what I've carefully cultivated all these months.

[5] DCE-05

Those pale flowers might still have time to fruit.

My great-grandmother sang with the girls of her village

as they pulled the flax. Songs so old and so tied to the season that they very sound seemed to turn the weather.

- (a) What is the theme of the poem? 5
- (b) Suggest an alternative title. Give reasons for your choice.
- (c) What do you understand by the concluding lines: 'Song so old ... turn the weather'? 5
- (d) Why does the poet/narrator not want to let go of summer?

8. "The Peace of Wild Things" by Wendell Berry

When despair for the world grows in me and I wake in the night at the least sound

[6] DCE-05

in fear of what my life and my children's lives may be,

I go and lie down where the wood drake rests in his beauty on the water, and the great heron feeds.

I come into the peace of wild things who do not tax their lives with forethought of grief. I come into the presence of still water.
And I feel above me the day-blind stars waiting with their light. For a time
I rest in the grace of the world, and am free.

- (a) What is the difference between 'people' and 'wild things'?
- (b) What does the poet worry about? 5
- (c) What do you understand by 'day-blind stars'?
- (d) Why does the poet finally feel 'free'? 5

- 9. Write poems on any two of the following topics:
 - (a) Rains
 - (b) Parents
 - (c) School days
 - (d) Football games
 - (e) Trees
